One of my constant refrains is "Permaculture is a decision making tool for arriving at regenerative solutions." Here I'm going to show how permaculture can help create strategies for deciding what cover crops to use. In permaculture, we're always looking for potent leverage points, and soil-building is a big one. If we create fertile, water-absorbing, [!]

If you've ever looked over the cost analysis for our homestead you'll see that we haven't been able to raise laying hens for eggs any cheaper than buying a carton from the store. One of our perpetual goals is to figure out how to decrease the cost to keep laying hens and find sources of free chicken food. It's one of the reasons why we keep homesteading records on our phones with the ...

A weed is a plant considered undesirable in a particular situation, "a plant in the wrong place". Examples commonly are plants unwanted in human-controlled settings, such as farm fields, gardens, lawns, and parks. Taxonomically, the term "weed" has no botanical significance, because a plant that is a weed in one context is not a weed when growing in a situation where it is in fact wanted, and ...
